

Aging, often viewed through a lens of loss or decline, becomes a profound subject that incites reflections on identity, memory, and the human experience. 'Visages of Time: The Art of Aging Across Centuries' brings together a selection of remarkable portraits that highlight the essence of the aged form, transcending mere representation to explore deeper narratives of wisdom and resilience. From Francisco Domingo y Marquès'

*Portrait of an Old Man' to Robert Henri's evocative 'Himself,' these artworks collectively form a dialogue that juxtaposes aesthetic techniques and emotional depth through varied cultural lenses. By examining the textures of skin, the gravity of expressions, and the intimate settings captured in each piece, we invite visitors to connect with the subjects portrayed—a grandparent, a sailor, or an elderly woman—all possessing rich personal histories that echo societal values and notions of beauty. This exhibition highlights the unexpected dialogues between artists from different periods and styles, emphasizing how the aging figure serves as both a vessel of memory and an icon of enduring existence in a rapidly changing world. Visitors are encouraged to immerse themselves in the contemplative power of these portraits, contemplating what it means to age and be remembered.
