

This exhibition delves into the intricate relationship between aging and artistry, showcasing works that evoke a profound understanding of the human condition as it unfolds through time. From iconic depictions of old age like Nicolas Maer's 'An Old Woman Dozing over a Book' to the poignant narrative of 'Antiochus Yearning for Stratonice' by Stefano Pozzi, each artwork presents a window into the emotional landscapes of aging. Themes of wisdom, nostalgia, and the inevitability of time resonate through various styles and cultures, from Jean-François Raffalli's impressionistic 'Afternoon Tea' to George Catlin's intimate portrayal of generational bonds in 'An Old Nayas Indian, His Granddaughter, and a Boy.' This exhibition also explores unexpected dialogues, such as the absurdity found in Quentin Massys' 'The Matched Lovers' against the backdrop of aging, enhancing our understanding of human experiences that transcend time. By emphasizing color, composition, and technique, we invite visitors to contemplate the beauty and significance of aging in art, fostering a richer appreciation for these diverse interpretations while connecting them to contemporary themes of identity and memory.
